

Muskie talks on state's future

BATH — Taking time out from a traveling schedule that will take him across the nation the next few weeks, to Japan, and to Great Britain, Senator Edmund S. Muskie came back to his home state this past weekend night. "It's good to be home," he said.

It was a happy, relaxed Muskie in Bath Friday night for the 14th Annual Banquet of the Bath Area Chamber of Commerce. He was surrounded by most service men, the national press, and the most extensive following of a candidate for Vice President of the United States, the Senator seemed to be enjoying himself at the banquet and earlier at a press conference and reception at the Hyatt School.

"It's not comfortable to be here after one has been overseas," the Senator said of his home state which made him Governor and later to Senator.

But he warned that if Maine is a good place to live in and still here, it may not be in the future if things are not taken by the people to preserve what should be preserved and change what should be changed.

"It seems incredible that you could raise 3,000 miles of coastline," the Senator said, speaking of changes along the Maine coast. "But you'll find it's not as bad as it seems."

Over the years, the Senator said, Maine has been very much a state of change. He has meant the state's lagging behind compared with some other states in the country, he said, but it also meant that "we are in a position to benefit from the mistakes of other parts of the country."

But change is coming to Maine. "The changes that are coming to change, preserve, and create a better future, nothing will happen unless people are willing to get the job done only if you work at it," he said.

The Senator began his evening in Bath with a warm conference and reception at the Hyatt School, before going to the Hyatt School to the Hyatt School at the Hyatt School.

He said that there was a lot of talk about the state's future. "I think the future of the state is in the hands of the people," he said. "I think the future of the state is in the hands of the people."

Muskie said he had been warmly received in Maine, that "it's a state of opportunity and a state of opportunity."
